

Structured Evidence Synthesis for Journal Clubs

Background: Journal clubs often end with fragmented notes and weak citations.

Method: The workflow normalizes PDFs, URLs, and notes into source chunks.

Finding 1: Chunk-level evidence links make every key claim reviewable.

Finding 2: Deliverable-first outputs such as briefs and slides improve reuse.

Limitation: Content still needs human judgment for framing and domain nuance.

Conclusion: Slides and briefs are the highest-visibility outputs for first-time users.
